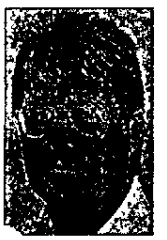
Wade to instruct at Bardmoor clinic

TENNIS
H.A. Branham



A firsthand experience:

At last year's U.S. Open, two tennis writers were at the National Tennis Center working up a 40-and-over sweat. It was early. It could've been going better.

Right about the time the rallies finally picked up, a statuesque women walked on the court, apologizing that we would have to move. But first, she wanted to know if we could "hit a bit" to warm her up for a clinic she would be conducting later that morning.

What followed were some of the best 15 minutes I've spent on a tennis court.

Virginia Wade — former Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion — was across the net. She was like a double espresso. The groundstrokes flowed from her racket. We were obliged to do our best to follow her example.

It went well. Thanks to her, we started finding the strings. Even looked like we knew what we were doing for a moment or so.

And that was without her saying a word.

Friday she'll be in Largo, offering actual instruction. She joins fellow former tour professional Wendy Turnbull, who is running another clinic sponsored by the Virginia Slims Legends Tour at Bardmoor Tennis and Fitness.

Wade

Wade and Turnbull are playing the tour for the second-consecutive year. It comes to Saddlebrook Resort in Wesley Chapel on May 4-5, with Martina Navratilova, Evonne Goolagong and Billie Jean King the other top names.

The clinic — scheduled 9:30-11 a.m. — is free, open to men and women. Marta Vander Vlis, Bardmoor's membership manager and tournament director, expects 75-100 players. Call (813) 391-2205 for information.

In the Wade-Turnbull combinations, they'll get it all: Wade's flowing strokes and Turnbull's resourceful all-court game. Wade was more the singles player in her day. Turnbull fashioned one of the all-time doubles records, winning nine Grand Slam titles; many with Rosie Casals, another Legends Tour member.

Tickets sales for the Legends Tour's Saddlebrook "are brisk," event manager Kitty Winterhalter said. It was a sellout last year. It's a slightly-larger stadium this year — 3,200 seats, all reserved. Tickets are $27.50 for one day, $50 for two days. Box seating is also available, at various prices. Call (813) 538-2221. The competition format is uncertain, Winterhalter said. But there will be singles and doubles. You can bet that many people hope to see Navratilova and Pam Shriver, the greatest women's doubles team, paired again. ...

Cheval Country Club in Lutz is site of a Virginia Slims Grass-roots Challenge "local qualifier."
